Gigantic Ozone Energy enters VLCC trades for a bargain price

Hans Thaulow · October 18, 2022

One new player who has made a bargain in the segment is Hong Kong-based oil and gas trading company Gigantic Ozone Energy, which has emerged as the taker of 2005-built 320,000 dwt VLCC Pratika, formerly called Maran Andromedas. The Daewoo-built tanker was noted sold for $37m in August. The price is a bargain compared to today's prices.

Brokers in Asia assume that Gigantic Ozone Energy has become involved in the movement of sanctioned oil to China.

To compare the price for this VLCC, sales chatter surrounds a sister ship sold by the same owner Greek owner, Maran Tankers. The Maran Aquarius is understood to have just been sold for just under $53m.

Drone attack on VLCC taking on oil in Yemen

A near miss for a VLCC from another drone strike at a terminal in Yemen yesterday has ship operators worried about passing certain hot spot areas in the Middle East.

The Hong Kong-owned, Panama-flagged Pratika VLCC was attacked by Houthis while taking on a cargo of oil at the al-Dhabba oil terminal in Hadhramaut province. The drone strike missed and the ship then left the site and is now heading west to the Red Sea with no reports of any damage to the ship, recently bought by Hong Kong's Gigantic Ozone Energy.

Dubai newcomer Teodor Shipping linked to move into VLCC shipping

Middle East company only became a shipowner in October, databases suggest

A little-known Middle Eastern company has reportedly now entered the VLCC arena after only buying its first ships in October.

The name of Dubai-based Teodor Shipping first cropped up two months ago when it was linked to the purchase of three tankers.

Two other VLCCs called Uri and Yug were also previously with the Comoros flag, but are now registered in Equasis as flag unknown.
