Tanker missing for over a month off Oman with $30m China-bound cargo

Published 10 August 2021, 02:11

An aframax tanker has been missing for more than a month after loading a $30m cargo of crude oil in Oman bound for China.

The 106,000-dwt Winsome (built 2000) issued an AIS signal on 5 July shortly after it set out on its voyage from Sohar, Oman, and then stopped transmitting.

The vessel indicated it was heading east at the time of its last transmission, but did not give a destination.

While it is not unusual for tankers in the region to switch off their AIS, the vessel does not appear to have sailed on to China.

It is unclear what has happened to the vessel. There is speculation that it could have been hijacked by Iranian interests, because of similar recent incidents — and the sometimes murky nature of tanker movements in the region.

The U.S. Department of the Treasury's Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) has announced new sanctions on two individuals, including a tanker master, and five entities for their alleged involvement in facilitating weapons procurement for the Iranian-backed Houthi militant group in Yemen.

The sanctions also extend to the UAE-based Stellar Wave Marine L.L.C, manager of the Cameroon-flagged OTARIA, and its captain, Vyacheslav Salyga. The vessel was allegedly involved in shipping commodities for Houthi financier Sa'id al-Jamal.
